Making Music is Good For Your Brain!

Whether you prefer the organ, piano, or keyboard, playing music provides neurological benefits in ways that simply listening to music cannot. Studies suggest that playing music:

- Can enhance cognitive functioning, reduce stress and provide valuable social support
- May reduce anxiety and improve brain function and mood
- Builds hand-eye coordination
- Enhances concentration
- Strengthens math skills through learning music theory
- Improves reading and comprehension skills

Playing music will also build confidence and perseverance, while inspiring creativity and healthy emotions. It's never too late to learn how to play.

Graduation March

by: Bil Curry

Every time March comes around the temptation is to do a march style. This time I wrote a march that should be good for class graduations. The melody is easy enough but the chords will require a little bit of practice. To make this easier, play only the chords in the boxes.

- Use the Grand March style, Basic March, or slow down the tempo of any 4/4 march style.
- Begin with the Intro at Tempo 90. Two measures before the Intro is over, tap the bottom Tempo button several times until you slow down to Tempo 80 (+/-).
- Play the notes of the song smoothly (connect) but also pay close attention to the staccato marks.
- When you get to the end, press either FX (Fill) to repeat the whole song or press the Ending button.
Hope you like it!
